

	Question	Answer
1	Can I declare Lost without playing a Character?	Yes. If you cannot play a Character, you must declare Lost. Therefore, you may declare Lost by choosing not to play a Character.
2	I declared Lost. When does a skill that triggers “at the end of this turn” resolve?	The condition is not fulfilled, and the effect expires.
3	I declared Lost. When does a skill that triggers “when you declare Lost” resolve?	Resolve the effect immediately after declaring Lost and before the Interval.
4	I declared Lost. How long does a skill that lasts “during this turn” remain active?	The skill remains active until just before the Interval, then ends.
5	I declared Lost. How long is previously calculated Offense Point referenced?	Offense Point ceases to exist before the Interval.
6	I declared Lost while there is a Side Blocker in the Block Area. What happens to that card?	Send that card in the Drop Area.
7	During the Interval, what happens if I already have 7 or more cards in my hand when I would draw until I have 6 cards?	Continue the game with the same number of cards in your hand. For example, if the player who lost the set has 7 cards in their hand, they add 1 card from the Score Area to their hand and start the next set with 8 cards.
